MEMPHIS IN PARADE

Mystery surrounds the death of Miss Rhoda Washington, 21 years of age, who died Wednesday morning of last week in a hospital in Paducah. For eleven days preceding her death she remained unconscious after being found in a bath tub filled with water at her home in that city. Attending physician say that death resulted from a congestion of the brain which could have been caused either by the hot water or a fall in the tub. She never regained consciousness enough to make any recognition or to recognize relatives.

Miss Washington was a former resident of this city, leaving two years ago to accept a position in Paducah. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Washington, of Fredonia, one brother and a half sister.

The body was taken to Fredonia for funeral and burial services.

McDONNELL-WILLIAMS

Mr. Homer McConnell and Miss Nona Belle Williams were united in marriage in Evansville on Wednesday at eleven A. M. The Rev. Luke, pastor of the First Baptist church officiated. On Thursday the happy couple left for Chicago, Louisville and Cincinnati before returning to Marion.

Miss Williams, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Williams, of this city, is a beautiful young lady of many charms. Homer is the only son of W. T. McConnell merchant of this city.

Mr. Neville Moore and Miss Melba Williams accompanied the couple to Louisville.

The Press extends congratulations.

WILSON-WOODS

Mr. H. L. Woods, of Lexington, Va., and Miss Sadie Woods, of Marion, Ky., were quietly married yesterday soon before the members of the immediate family at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Welford White, on Perry Street.

The decorative scheme for this occasion was most effective, being a profusion of holly, artistically designed the ugliest of the living room.

A very impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wm. H. Irvine immediately following the ceremony a delightful luncheon was served.

The bride who was most attractive, attire in a navy blue tailored suit, black hat and accessories in harmony with which she wore a cage bouquet of pink rose buds and valentine lilies, has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. White, for the past ten days and during her stay, has been the inspiration of many social affairs. She has visited in Helena several times and claims a large circle of friends in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left yesterday for an extended bridal trip to California and a tour trip through the West. Helena Daily World.

THANKS

We want to thank our friends and neighbors for their kindness they showed during the sickness and death of our little boy. May God's blessing go with you all in our prayer.

Farm Bureau Notes

LECTURE HERE TUESDAY EVENING

The egg laying contest is running right along in full blast over the county. Complete returns were not received last month due to a number not starting their records November 1st. The leaders in the first group which comprises those with flocks of 50 or less are Mrs. Hannah Holt, first; Mrs. Lenora Terry second. In the group of 50 to 100 Mrs. Allie Postlethwait is first. In the group of 200 or over Mr. M. L. Kennedy is first. The flock in the county laying the highest average number of eggs to Mr. Allie Postlethwait.

The average number of eggs is obtained by dividing the total number of eggs by average number of hens. A point that was especially noticeable in the several of the records turned in was the marked increase in the egg yield coming along about the second or third weeks showing the effect of balanced feed was having. This will be approximately 20 reporting the first of January and the results should prove very interesting.

It is not too late to enroll yet you have everything to gain and nothing to lose. A dozen eggs are worth at the present time considerably more than a bushel of corn.

LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT UP

The common cattle grub does an estimated annual damage of $0 millions of dollars to the hides, beef, and milk production. So serious is the damage to the hides that the National Tannery Council is taking steps in co-operation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture to work out a method of eradicating the pest. At present the only plan that offers results is the systematic removal of warbles from the backs of cattle as soon as they are noticed. It is believed that if cattle owners generally could do this during the winter and spring the warble would soon become practically extinct.

COMMUNITY PROGRAMS

At the annual meeting of County Agents held last week at Lexington the Community Program was the main topic of discussion. The majority of the County Agents in the state are carrying on their extension work thru local community clubs or other organizations. One County Agent reported as high as 100 community clubs meeting once a month. The program is worked out to help solve the various problems of that particular community. An example, poultry flocks not laying at all well what would be the thing to remedy the difficulty? One thing helpful would be to feed a balanced feed, another to house properly. Several demonstrators in the community should be obtained to follow out improved methods and the results reported regularly to the club and in this way the community difficulty would be overcome. The community program is designed to be of help to everyone in that locality. There are several community programs in operation now in Crittenden county and the results are very encouraging.

Marion, Ky.

DEAR FRIENDS,

We want you to know that everybody in our store wishes everybody in your family the happiest and most prosperous Christmas you have ever enjoyed.

The Christmas spirit is very real and very present these days. With Santa Claus here it is in the very air. Judging by the number of people that were in the Store last week shopping, this season is going to be one of the most genial Christmases in many years. And why should it not be? The benefits are twofold. As one gift shopper was heard to remark last Christmas, "I certainly feel better for having sent those presents, even if no one else does."

Now is the best time for gift shopping, and this Store is ready to fill practically every gift need—and reasonable requirements as well—with every satisfaction and with such economy as we believe will be most difficult to equal.

Nothing would please us better than to have your family make our Store your Official Christmas Headquarters during your Holiday shopping. We are here to serve you and help to show you how to economize in buying the most useful and practical gifts for the Holidays, and our prices this year are lower than ever.

We feel very sure that if you give us your Holiday business you will never regret having favored us with your trade.

Again let us wish you the finest compliments of the season.

Very faithfully yours,

J. H. MAYES & SONS

"Do ye want to go home along as I go, maw?" he asked.

The three women turned their eyes toward the lanky man. He was standing straighter than they had ever seen him standing before, and he held his reporter across one of his thin shoulders in a manner that was almost soldierly. It was as though he had just discovered a little extra unknown depth to himself.

The truth was that he was carrying a secret that was great and almost too much for him.

His aged mother came wading after him, "Come here, my boy, come where we can talk in private," she said.

CHAPTER XII.

Jailed.

Cartersville lies close between the points of two outlying foothills, and it is a delightfully lazy and old-fashioned town. For the most part it is made up of gabled old brick houses, which have pretty settings of green lawns, roses, honeysuckles and trees. Even in the small business district, the streets are lined with trees. They have electric lights there, and water mains, a common school and a high school, a courthouse, a jail and a theater.

It was a little after nightfall when Dale and the other two men rode through the shaded streets. Dale noted that the people they met under the swinging lights spoke cordially and with marked courtesy to his companion. It was very evident that the officer and Major Bradley were in high standing in their town house.

Sheriff Tom Flowers drew in before a blinding rock that stood in front of the courthouse, a great old wooden building with a clock in its tower. "We'll dismount here," said he.

They did. The major took the reins of his horse.

"I'll see that the animal is well cared for sir," he said to Dale. "And as soon as I have seen to our horses, I'll be with you. I wish to talk matters over with you. Suppose I bring supper for both of us?"

Dale thanked Bradley, and turned away with the officer. They walked a short block and entered a low, square building of brick and stone of which the windows were small and high and barred with iron. Dale knew that it was the Cartersville jail and his heart sank in spite of him. Just as death by violence had been entirely new to him, so also was this sentence new to him.

Flowers took a ring of heavy keys from the hand of the jailer, and led the way down a whitewashed corridor. It was not yet bedtime, and the other prisoners were still up; some of them were reading newspapers others were trying to mend their clothing while others were doing nothing. A few of them waved out boldly and bade the new prisoner welcome, and each of them received a gruff order from the sheriff to keep quiet. Dale paid no attention whatever to his would-be tormentors.

At an iron door at the end of the corridor, the officer halted and faced about.

As Major Bradley rose to ask the jailer to come and let him out, Dale muttered dolefully,

"Tell me, major, what do you think of my case? It looks rather bad, doesn't it?"

"Not bad enough to warrant your sending me over it, my boy," said Bradley, showing his polished white teeth in a smile that was meant to be reassuring. "I think we'll get you out of it. Anyway, don't worry about it. Worry will kill a cat, they say. You didn't kill Black Adam Hall. John Moreland had taught you how to shoot pretty well, and if you took even half as careful an aim as you think you did, you couldn't have missed Hall's hat by much."

"I realize all that, yknow," replied Dale, and I'm very much obliged to you, sir."

Flowers unlocked the door, and Bill Dale walked in. Flowers locked the door and went away.

Dale began to inspect his quarters. To all appearances, they were at least clean. There was a narrow bed covered with a pair of gear blankets, a stool and a soapdish and nothing more.

The light in the corridor behind him made snaky black lines of shadows on the brick partition walls and the outer wall of stone. He stumbled in spite of himself. He put up one hand and turned on a small light, which dispelled the snaky shadows—and showed him a line from Dante's Inferno that he had seemed very miserable; some former occupant of that cell had written it with charcoal on the whitewashed outer wall.

Then Dale sat wearily down on the narrow bed, leaned his head upon his hands and began to think.

He had always wanted difficulties to overcome barriers to surmount, a work to do, a fight to fight for himself. In full measure he had found them every one. He did not doubt his ability to overcome the difficulties surmount the barriers, do his work well and fight his fight as a good man fights, and win if it were not for the charge of having shot and killed Black Adam Hall!

He firmly believed that it had been his bullet that had finished the earthly existence of the giant hillman. True, it had been an accident. But how he had to sit there a jury that it had been an accident? Would the jury take his word for it? The jury would not be terrible Heck because he said that she thought Dale, but I didn't know it was the little better than torture.

"I may drop dead right here in my tracks, you know," said Dale, "but I may as well die here as anywhere else."

He dropped it. Man, I'd die here. What was my name?

Heck became so angry that she thought Dale, but I didn't know it was the little better than torture.

"I may drop dead right here in my tracks, you know," said Dale, "but I may as well die here as anywhere else."

Heck became so angry that she thought Dale, but I didn't know it was the little better than torture.

OLDEST LIVING CITY

Roof of the "Straight" Street in Damascus.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.

When France obtained the mandate for Syria after the World War, she fell heir to what is reputed to be the oldest "living" city in the world—Damascus. Nearly 4,000 years ago the writer of Gilgamesh mentioned this old city, and spoke of it as a place of note. It existed when the Pharaohs ruled over Egypt; it probably saw Babylon rise, and certainly it saw that proud city fall. And it has lived as other world-famous places at all it have passed into oblivion or lost their glory: Memphis, Thebes, Nineveh, Sardis, Tyre, Sidon, Jerusalem, Susa, Ephesus, a long procession of mighty cities.

Situated at the head of the Barada near the east end of the Mediterranean and on the land route between Egypt and the rest of Africa on one hand, and Asia and Europe on the other, Damascus has occupied a position in which it could not avoid importance. With the establishment of Mohammedanism it took on increased importance as the assembling point for the great long crossing of the desert sands to holy Mecca. And when it is added that the city is encompassed by a fertile plain through which flows an abundance of water, its early consequence the vitality and its long life can easily be understood. It is set in the oasis of oases, a grove more than 50 miles in circuit of nut and fruit trees interspersed with gardens of vegetation. No wonder the Bedouins from the sandy stretches of Arabia and Syria called it "the pearl of the desert."

In recent times Damascus was the second city in Turkey, being surpassed in size and importance only by Constantinople. Now Aleppo also in old Turkish territory, and since the war, a part, too, of French Syria, has about overtaken Damascus in size. But Damascus' hoary traditions will long give it first place in the hearts of the East.

Fascination of Its Streets.

Damascus is the rendezvous of people from all parts of the Marmarid world; time cannot be lost on its streets without being interested in the motley crowd of humanity that swarm through them, and in spite of creed and nationality manage to keep sweet tempers. The urban Damascene rubs against the swarthy, sun-burnt son of the desert without even a word of scorn or anger, the Mohammedan shoulders the Jew as if they were brothers in the faith, the spolied visitor from the Orient poises the not any too clean peasant from the surrounding villages, a Persian, Moors, Afghans, Indians, Egyptians, Sudanese, and others from many parts of the globe hurry along intent on something of importance that has brought them to this metropolis of the Orient.

On the streets are to be seen vendors of almost everything under the sun, especially in the way of eatables and, to those who are familiar with the value of the goods offered for sale, the words of the native are an open secret when he informs you that "Damascus you can't buy because for nothing" because of the cost of food.

On the same street, where a few yards of each other, may be seen the vendor of cucumbers with his arms fresh from the garden, exposed on a donkey's back (when the load was sold in pre-war days, it brought between 20 and 30 cents), the bread seller with his warm ovens of bread on a tray resting on a stand ready to supply the hungry with a gaudy-colored loaf for a cent, and the vendor of milk, who for another cent will give you a large basin of sweetened milk in which to soak your loaf. At different seasons you may face well at little root off nations, grapes, apricots, plums, peaches, apples, oranges, figs, etc., all the products of the gardens and orchards around the city.

All Due in the River Barada.

But some will ask whence comes all this abundance, for in no other part of Syria or Palestine is there such a profusion of fruit and vegetables at such low prices. The cause is the

The Wonder of Owning a NEW EDISON

To love your home is to want it filled with music.

But music is of several kinds.

Some merely entertains.

Other music does more; it also exerts a distinct cultural influence, and yields a beneficial power over mind and body.

Which kind do you want your family to have—your children grow up with? Obviously, that which brings the higher benefits. In the New Edison you have Mr. Edison's answer to that want.

A Different Instrument

This new instrument must not be confused with the ordinary phonograph. For instance, its realism is perfect. Living music and Re-Created music can not be told apart, even though heard in direct comparison. No other phonograph sustains this test

Again, the New Edison brings music in all its original power and effectiveness. Thus, it enables you to utilize the wonderful benefits of music—to soothe yourself when nervous, refresh yourself when tired, cheer yourself when sad. These practical uses for music have been fully worked out by famous psychologists in "Mood Music," a copy of which is free for the asking.

Such results are, of course, undreamed by the ordinary phonograph. They place the New Edison in an entirely different category. What Mr. Edison has developed is not so much the better phonograph, as the perfect instrumentality of music.

Compare

To grasp the true distinction between the New Edison and other phonographs — hear them in the same room. Compare!

Hear Rachmaninoff, the Russian pianist, on the New Edison. Then listen to the talking-machine version of his playing. Do the same with recordings of other instruments of delicate and distinctive tone—violin, harp, xylophone, and banjo.

With the human voice, from profoundest bass to topmost soprano, the difference is equally clear.

The New Edison, in literal truth, brings all of music the living artist can bring.

Isn't this the instrument you want your family to have?

Our Christmas Deposit Plan

We will deliver the New Edison of your choice to your Christmas tree. As long as the amount you name is sufficient to indicate good faith, we shall accept it as initial deposit. Pay no more till next year. Then, budget the balance according to your convenience.

Why wait another year? This plan makes it possible to give the family a real New Edison this year.

DAIRY FACTS

RECORDS OF GREAT BENEFIT

Much Valuable Information on Relations Between Milk and Butterfat Production

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Tabulation of the yearly records of 28,000 cow testing association cows has brought to light much valuable information on the relations between milk and butterfat production, butterfat test, income over cost of feed, and other factors, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The average milk production per cow was 3,930 pounds; butterfat, 240 pounds; butterfat test, 4.11 per cent, income over cost of feed $2.00; returns for $1 expended for feed, $2.11.

The records show that in those associations where the work has been continued for a long period the production has generally increased from year to year. As production increased, the income over cost of feed increased rapidly, and for each increase of 50 pounds in butterfat there was an increase of $15 in income over cost of feed.

Cows that freshened in the fall produced more milk and butterfat and greater average income over cost of feed than those which freshened in the spring or summer. Large cows excelled small cows of the same breed in production of milk and butterfat and in income over cost of feed. As the butterfat test increased, the average production of butterfat advanced and the average production of milk declined.

These records also indicate that cows remain in the herd an average of about 4.7 years.

BETTER-STOCK CAMPAIGN AID

Poster Issued by Department of Agriculture Illustrates Value of Good Dairy Cows

"For the Children's Sake" is the title of an attractive poster just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, to be used in its better-stock campaign. The poster shows two cows, each surrounded by pictures of healthy children. Good milk, it is well known, is a health-giving food for children, but acrob cows do not give enough milk to feed many children. One of the animals shown on the poster is a scrub cow which produced about five quarts of milk a day—enough to supply the five children who are grouped about her. The other cow is a purebred which gave a daily yield of 20 quarts—enough to feed the 20 children surrounding her.

"A good dairy cow," says the poster, "produces enough to feed about twenty children a quart of milk a day. An ordinary cow produces enough to feed about five children a quart a day. Every quart of milk contains health and a smile for some baby."

CHERRY VALLEY

Little Matten Davis was born on July 11, 1902. He departed this life October 11, 1921 at the age of 19 years, 4 months and four days. He was buried in the old family cemetery near Repton on Sunday. Funeral services were held by W. P. Murray at Repton Baptist church, attended by a large number of people who mourned his young son. He was married to Mrs. E. B. Lewis on Jan. 19, 1872. To this union three children, F. W. Mary E. and Nannie B.

Later he was married to Miss I. L. Haynes, who survives him and mourns his loss. He professed faith in Christ early in life and joined the Creek Creek Baptist Church where he lived a consistent Christian life until in later years he moved his membership to Repton Baptist church.

A charter member and Deacon where he lived a faithful worker and served in honor to the high calling and office until the day of his death. No one could be missed from the Repton church. His library included in the count all his life and was well known and was highly appreciated. He lived on his farm for four years ago when he moved to Marion.

Truly a Prince in Israel has fallen in triumph of a living faith and shall receive his great reward. He was a loyal citizen, a good husband, a devoted husband, a kind father, a devout Christian and churchman, a good neighbor and a friend to all. His family was indeed very devoted to him and to the last moment his laughter and son who were always fond of him together with his wife and relatives and friends were deeply saddened by his loss. The love and activities of a good and useful life rests from his labor and we wish him well in his journey.
